

South Carolina Integration Institute

The South Carolina Integration Institute deepened the collaboration between the state's Child Support Services Division, its Department of Corrections and the Center for Fathers and Families. Post-Institute, the agencies secured a grant to serve young fathers exiting the prison system. They are providing relationship, employment and skill building services to help stabilize these fathers and their families.

In addition, the Child Support Services Division is in the process of installing televisions to play videos about healthy relationships in its waiting rooms and providing print resources to help clients develop healthy relationship skills.
